Asynchronous online courses occur through online channels without real-time interaction and are taught 100% online, but do not have an assigned meeting time for the course. When you register for an asynchronous course in MyNIU, it will indicate the course is online (100%) asynchronous where the "room" is listed. There will not be listed course meeting times.

Chicago Inequality: The goal of this course is to examine a small selection of the work on urban inequality in the United States, with a particular focus on Chicago. The course will examine, in depth, the theories behind the evolution of the urban poor, as well as the impact of poverty upon individuals, and social institutions. The class will begin with an examination of poverty research and then examine ethnographic work on life in poor urban neighborhoods, dislocations that come about because of urban poverty, how urban inequality plays out in the education system, and how race and poverty play a role in the criminal justice system.

Crime & Mental Illness: This course focuses on the study of crime, violence, and mental illness. We will first learn about the different types of mental illness. We will then examine research on public perceptions of violence and stigma associated with mental illness, and mental illness in mass media. Next, we will examine how mental illness is related to crime and violence, including the role of deinstitutionalization, the prevalence of mental illness in jails and prisons, and how violence occurs in neighborhoods and families. Finally, we will consider legal and treatment issues, including the role of police, courts, and community programs.

This course presents a chronological and thematic study of six millennia of the arts and architecture in China, Japan, India and Southeast Asia, including burial arts from the neolithic through the T'ang dynasty, and encompassing Buddhist and Taoist ritual arts, painting, calligraphy, sculpture, ceramics, prints, garden design and architecture. We will study works in a wide variety of media-- jade, bronze, wood, lacquer, silk, ceramics and paper-- examining their emergence within their historical, religious and cultural contexts, as well as the persistent influence of their creation within the cultural and archeological setting. This course has no pre-requisites, and no previous exposure to Asian art is necessary. ARTH 294 satisfies PLUS (Creativity and Critical Analysis) requirements and is included in the Global Connections Pathway. This course is required for art history majors.

This course examines art and architecture in regions around the Mediterranean Sea between the 4th and the 9th centuries, a period of great cultural transformation. These centuries witnessed first the evolution of the pagan Roman empire of classical antiquity into the dominantly Christian Byzantine empire, followed by the birth of Islam in the Arabian peninsula and its rapid spread. Focusing on Southern Europe, the Middle East and North Africa, we will examine the impact of shifting religious affiliations, beliefs and practices on the creation of art and architecture as well as the interactions between artistic and architectural traditions associated with different faiths. Important themes running through the course will be: continuity and change in the imperial image; the architecture and decoration of sacred spaces; and the tension between images and idolatry.

This course normally spans the breadth of a traditional survey of Japanese art, from its prehistoric to premodern times, but is quite topical and selective in approach. The aim is to raise for consideration a wide range of media, from sculpture and painting to gardens, architecture, ceramics, textiles, and prints. It is hoped that this approach will also promote a greater understanding of the broad range of expressive function in Japan's arts. It will offer us an opportunity to see the ties that bind works of art to their cultural and historical contexts, as well as the threads that make cultural monuments timeless. This course satisfied PLUS (Society and Culture) and Gen Ed (Humanities and the Arts) requirements and has been certified as "Writing Infused."

The Destruction of Images/Images that Destroy: This course examines a historical range of image destruction from the perspective of the science of Vision and Visual Psychology. Two questions ground the course: Why has the simple act of seeing works of art and architecture been deemed so powerful and so threatening that it was necessary to destroy the art? How have works of art been designed to psychologically control people in various ways including (but not limited to) intimidation, hate speech, or lessons in inclusivity/ exclusivity? Lectures, readings, discussion, and the development of individual research projects that contribute to answering these questions will be part of the course.

The arts of Southeast Asia reflect a great variety of religions inextricably linked with the natural world which surrounded them: whether through traditional themes or contemporary artistic and exhibition practice which utilize materials from the immediate environment. This topic class will be elaborated through ways in which the countries of mainland and insular Southeast Asian cultures and society have interacted in the past and respond today to the environment through varied modes of artistic creation and self-expression. This course explores classical architecture, sculpture, painting, and prints; and more recently, contemporary film and performance pieces: revealing how artists have engaged with nature on issues of religion; reflecting on post-conflict aesthetics, delineating identities towards offering more nuanced and complex expressions of the human condition. Our goal here is to analyze how art embodies the co-evolution of social, cultural, and physical complex landscapes of Southeast Asia.

The violent destruction of images throughout the sixteenth century in Europe and the Americas foretold features of current iconoclams in the United States of the 21st century. Evidence suggests that iconoclams were rooted in aspects of human sightedness that are necessary for survival, yet tend to make images lightning rods for protests and targets for destruction. Each graduate student will pursue an original research project examining the rationales for making and breaking public monuments. Each of these projects will require graduate-level readings in English.
